BRYAN, TEXAS,

Have slaughtered and sold more cattle and hogs than all the other dealers here together.

WHY?

Because their way of doing business is to do it by wholesale. TWO big markets—15 men employed all the while catering to the wants of fastidious trade educated to eat good meats and no other. We have the facilities and intend to keep the trade by always selling the best at the lowest prices it can be bought for. We buy Wool, Hides, Pelts at highest market price.

NEW ISSUE OF STAMPS

UNCLE SAM HAS A SURPRISE IN STORE FOR THE PUBLIC.

Color, Design and Shape of Fifteen Denominations to be Changed. Harrison's Portrait on New Stamp. Value of Misprints.

Uncle Sam is going to issue a new series of postage stamps. Work on it has already begun in the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington. There will be new sizes and shapes, new shades and tints, and all will have new border designs.

With the exception of three series of commemorative stamps—the Columbian, Transmississippi and Pan-American—the present issue has been uninterrupted in use for twelve years. It is time for a change. So Uncle Sam thought, and he is busy making it.

The entire staff of skilled artists in the engraving division of the department are at work upon the new designs for fifteen denominations. While the faces of the same national heroes honored upon the present issue will, with one exception, be retained, entirely different portrait vignettes will be made in every case.

Thus the profiles of Franklin, Washington, Jackson and Jefferson on the 1, 2, 3 and 50 cent stamps will give way to three-fourths or seven-eighths full face portraits. New vignettes of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Sherman, Webster, Clay, Madison and Marshall are being selected for the remaining denominations. The face of Farragut will be substituted for that of Perry on the dollar stamp.

One entirely new stamp will come with the new issue. A new denomination has been selected to bear the portrait of Benjamin Harrison. This is to be a 13 cent stamp and will represent the cost of sending a registered letter of ordinary weight to any foreign point within the international postal union. Mrs. Harrison has been asked to furnish what she considers the best portrait of her late husband.

In preparing for a new stamp issue the first step is the submission of various designs by the corps of artists. Those selected will be enlarged until they are big enough to frame. They are then reduced photographically to the desired size of the completed stamp.

These photo miniatures are then printed on white paper and given to the engravers, together with the enlarged design and the original portraits of the subjects. This enables the engravers to attain greater exactness of detail and expression. After the vignettes are engraved the lettering and borders are added.

As soon as Uncle Sam or any other nation decides upon a new stamp issue philatelists institute a sharp lookout for "freaks." Before stamp printers, perforators, etc., have become well broken in on a new issue they make errors, and these are apt to pass the inspectors because the latter have not yet become accustomed to the new designs.

It will pay well to find a freak during the first days of the new series. When the Pan-American stamps were first issued last year, a sheet of the 2 cent denomination with the central locomotive vignette inverted happened to pass the inspector. Lucky people who got these realized as much as $30 apiece for them. Soon afterward a messenger at Easthampton, Conn., bought forty 1 cent Pan-American stamps for 40 cents, discovered that the central steamship vignette was inverted and sold the lot for $679. These freaks are steadily increasing in value.

When the war tax first went into effect, postage stamps were converted into internal revenue stamps by printing "I. R." over the face in black letters. A sheet of these of the 2 cent denomination had the surcharging inverted and passed the inspectors by some mistake. Today they are worth $2 apiece.

which are imperfectly perforated. A pair of 2½ cent internal revenue stamps perforated only one way were recently sold for $100.

Old, Old Story.

The car lurched violently, and the stout lady was thrown into the thin man's lap.

"Pardon me, sir," she began. "The car—"

"Oh, that's all right," he interrupted. "I'm a married man and am used to being sat upon."—Baltimore American.

FRENCH ELECTIONS.

HOW THE REPUBLIC CHOOSES ITS CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

Pay and Perquisites of a Member of the French Congress—Issues of the Coming Campaign—Personality of M. Waldeck-Rousseau.

France will soon be in the turmoil of a general election. Every four years an election is held throughout France for members of the chamber of deputies. Elections are held on Sunday, the date determined by the council of ministers. The coming ballot battle will occur on the last Sunday in April. The issues are more clearly defined than is usual in French politics, being in fact more personal than political.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the present premier, asks for another Conservative-Republican majority in the chamber of deputies and an extension of his premiership. His chief opponents are the Nationalists, who lack strong leaders, with the exception of one or two literary men, and who have no programme of great importance. The only definite feature in it seems to be a demand for change in the manner of electing the president and an alteration of his constitutional functions by which they would be made to resemble more closely those of the president at Washington.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau is also a wise and dextrous fusionist and has combined diverse elements in his support in a way that no other leader has done under the third republic. He has weathered more storms of popular prejudice than any other premier and in some way that puzzles the French and commands their admiration has done much to eliminate the frequent changes in cabinets and give parliamentary government a chance to develop. So the real issue in the coming elections is M. Waldeck-Rousseau.

The French parliament, like that of nearly all the great countries, consists of two branches. One is the senate and the other the chamber of deputies. The senate is composed of 300 members. Originally seventy-five of them held seats for life. Some time ago, however, a law was passed providing that on the death or resignation of a life senator the vacancy should be filled by election. This has eliminated the life senators. The term of a senator is nine years.

The senators are elected by delegates chosen by communes and municipalities acting in conjunction with representatives of the departments in the councils general, a body whose functions somewhat resemble those of county supervisors in some of our states. Every Frenchman of forty or upward who is not a member of any of the deposed dynasties is eligible to membership.

There are 584 members of the chamber of deputies. Of these 568 represent France, 6 Algeria and 10 the colonies. Broadly speaking, deputies are apportioned to each department on the ratio of one member to each 70,000 of population, foreigners not counting in this enumeration. To be eligible for the chamber of deputies a man must be twenty-five years of age and be a citizen, which dignity is conferred on any man of twenty-one years or over who resides two years in any one town or canton. All citizens of twenty-one years of age or upward are permitted to vote for deputies. Felony or desertion from the army works perpetual disfranchisement.

The stated sessions of the French parliament begin on the second Tuesday of January in each year and last at least five months. The president has use power also or convening it at any time. He must also call a session when half of the members of each branch of parliament request it. The members of the French parliament are paid for their services. The salary of a senator is $3,000 a year and of a deputy $1,800. French campaign methods are quite different from ours. Candidates for the French chamber of deputies seldom go about making "stump" speeches, and a house to house canvass, such as our congressional nominees sometimes make, is almost unknown. The Frenchman pins his faith to the placard. He writes his sentiments, has them printed in big type on posters of large size and then hires men to display them lavishly throughout his district. Sometimes the billposters of rival candidates clash. Then the campaign gets really warm.

This sort of thing is now going on all over France. It will all end peaceably on Sunday, April 27, when the French voters will go from early mass to the polls and afterward take their families out for the usual Sunday picnic in the woods or park.

BRAIN-FOOD NONSENSE.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain, another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not nourish a particular part of the body but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. GENERAL SMITH A FIGHTER

Brilliant Record of the Officer Accused of Cruelty in Samar.

General Jacob H. Smith, commanding the American forces in Samar, who has been charged by Major Waller with ordering the cruel treatment of the natives of that province for which that officer is now being tried, has had a long and honorable service in the army of the United States.

General Smith has fought with distinction in three wars besides spending over thirty years fighting Indians on the border. He began his military career as a lieutenant in the Second Kentucky Infantry during the civil war. He participated in many battles of that bloody contest and was severely wounded at Shiloh. At the close of hostilities he was given a commission in the regular army and for the next thirty years saw much service on the plains fighting Indians.

General Smith served with such distinction at San Juan Hill and other engagements around Santiago that he was promoted from the rank of major to that of lieutenant colonel. He was severely wounded while in the trenches and for seven days lay in the mud and water, refusing to go to the rear, saying his wound was trifling. Finally the general in command of the division heard of the major's condition and rode out to the trench where he was lying. He was in a raised corner of the trench, where he could keep his eye on every man in the regiment.

General Kent asked the major pleasantly whether he preferred to go to the hospital in an ambulance or bound and gagged upon a mule. The major replied that he did not want to go back to the hospital in any way.

"You've got to go back, major. You've got to go before I leave," said General Kent. "We've got some pretty fine men in this line, but we can't afford to take any chances with a man like you." And so the major was carried by force back to the hospital.

During his three years' service in the Philippines General Smith has commanded in a large number of important engagements and added greatly to his reputation as a brave and efficient officer.

General MacArthur, in a letter to the war department urging General Smith's promotion, said that "his capture of the town of Angeles was one of the most brilliant episodes of the campaign in the Philippines, the credit of which must be exclusively given to Colonel Smith."

SCULPTURE AT ST. LOUIS.

Fine Specimens of the Art to Adorn Exposition Buildings.

Statuary is to play an important part in the adornment of the buildings of the St. Louis exposition. The subjects chosen will be emblematic of the purposes for which the various buildings are intended. For the Textiles building five groups have been designed by Mr. Robert Brinhurst. These, while they bear directly on the manufacture of textile fabrics, are treated from a classical standpoint. Composition and sentiment are modern, but the outlines are Greek, the figures and draperies Greek, the highest conception of art.

In the groups on the Textiles building the figures will be ten feet high. Two groups are intended for the entrance, one at each side of the door, but a few feet from the ground.

These will consist of three figures each, the one representing "Spinning," the other "Weaving." In the former of these the central figure holds the cocoon, thus introducing a third branch of the textile industry, the manufacture of silk.

Gx-Gov. Hogg has returned from London, where he was lionized as a Texas oil magnate.

Talking about a Texan for president is all moonshine. The conditions do not warrant such idle speculation.

It will be well for the people of Brazos and surrounding counties to keep in mind the Central Texas Fair to be held here this fall, and to make preparations for exhibits. The premium lists are now being prepared.

R. B. Allen of Dallas has withdrawn from the race for lieutenant governor, leaving Senator George D. Neal of Navasota without opposition. Senator Neal will fill the position with credit to his state, his party and himself.

GENERAL SMITH A FIGHTER

Brilliant Record of the Officer Accused of Cruelty in Samar.

General Jacob H. Smith, commanding the American forces in Samar, who has been charged by Major Waller with ordering the cruel treatment of the natives of that province for which that officer is now being tried, has had a long and honorable service in the army of the United States.

General Smith has fought with distinction in three wars besides spending over thirty years fighting Indians on the border. He began his military career as a lieutenant in the Second Kentucky infantry during the civil war. He participated in many battles of that bloody contest and was severely wounded at Shiloh. At the close of hostilities he was given a commission in the regular army and for the next thirty years saw much service on the plains fighting Indians.

General Smith served with such distinction at San Juan Hill and other engagements around Santiago that he was promoted from the rank of major to that of lieutenant colonel. He was severely wounded while in the trenches and for seven days lay in the mud and water, refusing to go to the rear, saying his wound was trifling. Finally the general in command of the division heard of the major's condition and rode out to the trench where he was lying. He was in a raised corner of the trench, where he could keep his eye on every man in the regiment.

General Kent asked the major pleasantly whether he preferred to go to the hospital in an ambulance or bound and gagged upon a mule. The major replied that he did not want to go back to the hospital in any way.

"You've got to go back, major. You've got to go before I leave," said General Kent. "We've got some pretty fine men in this line, but we can't afford to take any chances with a man like you." And so the major was carried by force back to the hospital.

During his three years' service in the Philippines General Smith has commanded in a large number of important engagements and added greatly to his reputation as a brave and efficient officer.

General MacArthur, in a letter to the war department urging General Smith's promotion, said that "his capture of the town of Angeles was one of the most brilliant episodes of the campaign in the Philippines, the credit of which must be exclusively given to Colonel Smith."

SCULPTURE AT ST. LOUIS.

Fine Specimens of the Art to Adorn Exposition Buildings.

Statuary is to play an important part in the adornment of the buildings of the St. Louis exposition. The subjects chosen will be emblematic of the purposes for which the various buildings are intended. For the Textiles building five groups have been designed by Mr. Robert Brinhurst. These, while they bear directly on the manufacture of textile fabrics, are treated from a classical standpoint. Composition and sentiment are modern, but the outlines are Greek, the figures and draperies Greek, the highest conception of art.

In the groups on the Textiles building the figures will be ten feet high. Two groups are intended for the entrance, one at each side of the door, but a few feet from the ground.

These will consist of three figures each, the one representing "Spinning," the other "Weaving." In the former of these the central figure holds the cocoon, thus introducing a third branch of the textile industry, the manufacture of silk.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

By the Methodist Sunday School in Memory of Evan Benbow.

Inasmuch as our Heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to take from our midst, and from this Sunday school, one of our best and most consecrated members, Evan Benbow, and transplanted him to His court above: It is therefore meet that we ponder the ways of God, and try to profit by the lessons given us in this great affliction.

Our brother had just entered the full flush of early manhood and life with all its promises and hopes lay stretched out before him like a beautiful picture. Ambitious, energetic, active and full of good works, it seems hard that his young life, so full of promise, should thus early be cut off; yet we should remember that the ways of God are past finding out, and whatsoever He doeth is done well. We should take comfort in the thought that our brother in the days of his youth remembered his Creator and made the Rock of Ages the sheet anchor of his faith. We know he has entered into an eternal rest, and now has that blessed peace which belongs to them whose hearts and minds are staid on God.

To his bereaved family and loved ones we express our deepest sympathy and it is ordered that they be furnished a copy of these resolutions.

It is also ordered that a page in our minutes be set aside on which shall be inscribed these resolutions, or some other tribute to his memory.

THE installation of Nicholas Murray Butler as president of Columbia university is one of the most important events that have occurred in the college world in a long time. The elaborate preparations made by the college authorities to celebrate the occasion resulted in a programme covering three days.

The programme for the first day provided for a dinner given by Professor Butler's classmates, to be followed by

Columbia's

How the Big University
Honors Its New President

The library is approached from the south by a court 375 feet in width and 200 feet deep. It was erected at a cost of $1,250,000. It is built in the form of a Greek cross, and the style is pure classic. The extreme width of the building is 192 feet, and the height to the summit of the dome is 135 feet. The base is built of granite, and the building above this is of Indiana limestone.

Columbia is the fourth among American colleges in age. Only Harvard, William and Mary and Yale are older. The erection of the buildings on the new site began in 1895. The site alone cost $2,000,000. In 1900-01 the college was reorganized on the basis of a university and its various parts were brought into a harmonious whole. Under President Seth Low, who took the presidency in 1888, the greatest advances in the history of the college have been made, and its usefulness and fame have since steadily widened.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, who succeeds Seth Low as president of Columbia, is about forty years of age. He is one of the foremost educators, both theoretical and practical, in the United States and already has had the opportunity of declining no less than fourteen offers to become president of institutions of learning.

Dr. Butler was graduated in 1882 from Columbia college, receiving a degree of Ph. D. in 1884. He also studied in Berlin and Paris, and in 1898 received the degree of LL. D. from Syracuse university. His first appointment at Columbia was in 1885, as assistant in philosophy, and he has occupied the chair of philosophy and education in the university since 1890.

He was the first president of New York College For the Training of Teachers, now Teachers' college, which office he held from 1887 to 1891. He served as president of the New Jersey state board of education from 1888 to 1890 and as special commissioner from New Jersey to the Paris exhibition in 1889.

As a member of the New Jersey board Dr. Butler reorganized and greatly elevated the school system, introducing manual training, establishing a sysa students' hall in the immense gymnasium. The next day was arranged for the students to celebrate with field sports, athletics and baseball, a regatta on the Harlem river and a vaudeville performance at the college gymnasium in the evening. The third day was reserved for the formal installation of President Butler, when the charter and keys of the university were presented to him by the chairman of the board of trustees.

Never before has a college president been installed under such circumstances, nearly every college in the United States expressing a determination to join in the celebration.

President Roosevelt also accepted an invitation to be present and add his congratulations to those of the other distinguished persons who would do honor to Columbia and its new president.

Though today one of the richest educational institutions in the country, Columbia has had its days of hardship and poverty. Founded in 1754 by King George III, King's college, as it was known, was located near the present city hall, New York. It had a hard time weathering the stormy days of the Revolution. From Columbia were graduated such men as Alexander Hamilton and John Jay. In 1857 the college was moved to Forty-ninth street and Madison avenue, but the site was inadequate and the surroundings poorly suited for a great metropolitan university. Then nearly forty years later the institution was moved to its present site on Morningside heights, which has been described as the "noblest site that could have been chosen for the future home of this historic seat of learning."

Nature and art have combined to render the spot at once commanding and picturesque, and history has added to its interest. On the present site of the university the battle of Harlem was fought 125 years ago.

Morningside heights rise 150 feet above the Hudson river, with a sheer descent on the east and west and sloping gently to the north and south. In close proximity to the college are the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, St. Luke's hospital, the new National tem of approved high schools and thereby stimulating the schools to raise their standards, classifying teachers' certificates in such a manner as to encourage the teachers to attain higher qualifications, eliminating politics from the office of the superintendent and requiring the appointment of professional men as county superintendents. The period of Dr. Butler's membership in the board was the most progressive in the history of the state.

He was president of the National Education association in 1895 and is now a life director and one of the most active members of that organization. He is also a trustee of the Washington Memorial institution.

Dr. Butler is well known throughout the country as the editor of The Educational Review and of The Great Educator Series and of The Teachers' Professional Library and by numerous addresses and papers on educational subjects. He was selected by the bureau of education in Washington as editor of the monographs on education in the United States submitted as part of the educational exhibit at the Paris exhibition in 1900, and he received special recognition in the form of a gold medal.

At the present time Dr. Butler is the president of the Society For the Scientific Study of Education, the membership in which is limited to professors of education in colleges and universities, normal school teachers and heads of state and city school systems, and he is also president of the Association of American Universities, composed of Harvard, Columbia, Clark, Catholic, Yale, Johns Hopkins, Cornell, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Chicago, Michigan, Wisconsin, California and Stanford.

Professor Butler, besides being a close friend of former President Low, now mayor of Greater New York, enjoys the confidence and friendship of President Roosevelt.

The EYE

The Eye is a wonderful piece of divine mechanism, and deserves the best care within the reach of human knowledge. The delicate construction of this organ makes it necessary to use great care in selecting eyeglasses and spectacles. It is not generally understood by those depending upon artificial assistance for good vision, that it requires as much skill and scientific knowledge to adjust lenses to the eye as it does to prescribe medicines for the human system. Much of the present day eye trouble is due to wearing cheap, decentered lenses. No person should wear a glass unless prescribed by a reliable eyesight specialist, one thoroughly acquainted with anatomy, physiology and diseases of the eye, laws of light and science of optics.

Ordinary failing eyesight is by some regarded as alarming—by others treated too carelessly. All eyes begin to fail at 40 years of age, some have troubles a year or two before that time, the majority not till after. Ninety per cent of eye troubles are due to "putting off" the use of glasses after failure begins, or to wearing of wrong ones. Age, however, is no criterion for the wearing of glasses. Many are born with greater defects than come with the advance of years. When the need of glasses is actually evidenced, the CHILD OF TEN needs them much more than the adult of eighty. Nerve and muscle strain, due to the eye defects of children, act as an impediment to mental and physical development. What the eye sees is telegraphed at once to the brain. Strain the nerves of the eye and the brain is made to feel and suffer. Eye testing and glass fitting has advanced to a science—even to the man who has perfected himself in that science, there is no one test which can always be depended upon for accurate results. That a complete and reliable diagnosis of the Eye can only be reached by the use of several tests is becoming universally acknowledged.

SYMPTOMS OF EYE DEFECTS, SHOWING THE NEED OF GLASSES OR NEED OF DIFFERENT GLASSES.

Headache, dizziness, aversion to bright light, inability to see at close range, with perfect distant vision, sleepy feeling and desire to close the eyes when reading, or lines and letters running together, darting pains in eyeballs or temples, acquired cross eyes in children under ten years of age, blurring of vision, or inability to see objects distinctly at a distance, holding reading or close work either beyond or inside the normal distance of twelve inches, fatigue, or requiring a stronger light when reading, smarting or burning sensation in or about the eyes, seeing objects double, quivering of lids, or jerking of muscles in and around the eyes, dark floating spots or bright lights flashing before the eyes, turning head sideways to look at an object, or holding object too close, watering of the eyes. This is an age of Specialists. The ability to do one thing and do it well is more to be commended and is of more benefit to humanity, than to do many things and none equal to the best. We limit our practice on the eye to errors of refraction, and thoughtful people are showing their appreciation of the specialist who devoted his time and study to acquiring knowledge of the eyes, and individual eyesight peculiarities.

Spring Oxford

Enriched by Fresh New Head

THE installation of Nicholas Murray Butler as president of Columbia university is one of the most important events that have occurred in the college world in a long time. The elaborate preparations made by the college authorities to celebrate the occasion resulted in a programme covering three days.

The programme for the first day provided for a dinner given by Professor Butler's classmates, to be followed by a students' ball in the immense gymnasium. The next day was arranged for the students to celebrate with field sports, athletics and baseball, a regatta on the Harlem river and a vaudeville performance at the college gymnasium in the evening. The third day was reserved for the formal installation of President Butler, when the charter and keys of the university were presented to him by the chairman of the board of trustees.

Never before has a college president been installed under such circumstances, nearly every college in the United States expressing a determination to join in the celebration.

President Roosevelt also accepted an invitation to be present and add his congratulations to those of the other distinguished persons who would do honor to Columbia and its new president.

Though today one of the richest educational institutions in the country, Columbia has had its days of hardship and poverty. Founded in 1754 by King George III, King's college, as it was known, was located near the present city hall, New York. It had a hard time weathering the stormy days of the Revolution. From Columbia were graduated such men as Alexander Hamilton and John Jay. The library is approached from the south by a court 375 feet in width and 200 feet deep. It was erected at a cost of $1,250,000. It is built in the form of a Greek cross, and the style is pure classic. The extreme width of the building is 192 feet, and the height to the summit of the dome is 135 feet. The base is built of granite, and the building above this is of Indiana limestone.

Columbia is the fourth among American colleges in age. Only Harvard, William and Mary and Yale are older. The erection of the buildings on the new site began in 1895. The site alone cost $2,000,000. In 1900-01 the college was reorganized on the basis of a university and its various parts were brought into a harmonious whole. Under President Seth Low, who took the presidency in 1888, the greatest advances in the history of the college have been made, and its usefulness and fame have since steadily widened.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, who succeeds Seth Low as president of Columbia, is about forty years of age. He is one of the foremost educators, both theoretical and practical, in the United States and already has had the opportunity of declining no less than fourteen offers to become president of institutions of learning.

Dr. Butler was graduated in 1882 from Columbia college, receiving a degree of Ph. D. in 1884. He also studied in Berlin and Paris, and in 1898 received the degree of LL. D. from Syracuse university. His first appointment at Columbia was in 1885, as assistant in philosophy, and he has occupied the chair of philosophy and education in the university since 1890.

He was the first president of New York College For the Training of Teachers, now Teachers' college, which office he held from 1887 to 1891. He served as president of the New Jersey state board of education from 1888 to 1890 and as special commissioner from New Jersey to the Paris exhibition in 1889.

As a member of the New Jersey board Dr. Butler reorganized and greatly elevated the school system, introducing manual training, establishing a sys-

Dr. Butler is well known throughout the country as the editor of The Educational Review and of The Great Educator Series and of The Teachers' Professional Library and by numerous addresses and papers on educational subjects.
